Hi Chan and Patrick,

The community recently received documents from the county outlining previous code enforcement cases on the subject property. You may have already seen these documents but one thing that stood out, in particular, is that the code enforcement officer who handled similar complaints on the property in 2010 (and found no violation) is the same officer leading the investigation now.

In 2010, despite many of the same arguments we are making now, the code enforcement officer found no violations had taken place, despite loads of similar evidence. She cited in her decision that the activity was "maintenance of existing roads" and that her review of imagery back to 1996 did not yield any new roads. This conclusion is difficult to accept.

With that in mind, we are now even more concerned about the county's lead on this investigation and want to emphasize that we value your close oversight and involvement.

I have included two documents to support this concern and that may also be useful to your investigation. The e-mail thread, in particular, outlines one resident's account of the activity as it took place.

Thank you,
Concerned Residents
